Córdoba is a city in Andalusia, Spain, and the capital of the province of Córdoba. The city primarily lies on the right bank of the Guadalquivir, in the south of the Iberian Peninsula. Once a Roman settlement, it was taken over by the Visigoths, followed by the Muslim conquests in the eighth century and later becoming the capital of the Umayyad Caliphate of Córdoba. During these Muslim periods, Córdoba was transformed into a world leading centre of education and learning. Córdoba has more World Heritage Sites than anywhere in the world, with four. One of them being the Mezquita-Cathedral.

The Mosque-Cathedral officially known by its ecclesiastical name of Cathedral of Our Lady of the Assumption is the cathedral of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Córdoba dedicated to the Assumption of Mary and located in the Spanish region of Andalusia. However, due to its status as a former mosque, it is also known as the Mezquita and as Great Mosque of Córdoba. The mosque was converted to a cathedral in 1236 when Córdoba was captured by the Christian forces of Castile during the Reconquista. The structure itself underwent only minor modifications until a major building project in the 16th century inserted a new Renaissance cathedral nave and transept into the centre of the building.
